Making Change At A Larger, BPS-wide Level:
What systemic efforts are underway that people should know about and plug into? Are there gaps that need parents' attention?

Notes prepared for Tackling Racism in the Boston Public Schools: A Forum for Parents and Families

How Racism Shows Up
1) Punishment 2) Teachers (Quality; Evaluation; Cultural Competence)
3) Finance (Budgets; Allocations; Equity) 4) Voice (Community Engagement; Parent Organizing; Decision-making; School Committee; Equity) 5) Peers

Important To Consider
1) Policy 2) Data (What is measured?) 3) Culture 4) Information

Punishment (School Discipline)
Premise: Students of color and students with disabilities still face higher suspension & expulsion rates that other counterparts, often for similar, minor misbehavior.

Movement: Nationwide movement to reduce the use of out-of-school exclusions and provide those students who are barred temporarily from the classroom access to the resources they need to keep up with their studies

Effort: Chapter 222
- Went into effect July 1, 2014
- Provisions:
  - All public schools, including charter schools, must comply and revise their policies to assure that exclusion is a last resort and that alternatives to exclusion are tried first.
  - Students who face school exclusion are entitled to full due process rights, including parental involvement and accommodation for students with limited English proficiency
  - During both short-term and long-term exclusions, students have the right to make academic progress.
  - During long-term exclusions, students must be provided alternative education services.
  - Except for very serious offenses, students may not be excluded for more than 90 school days.
  - Schools must review their school exclusion data and increase their reporting to DESE.
  - DESE must post annual state-wide exclusion data each fall.
  - DESE must analyze the annual exclusion data and follow-up when the numbers are high and when there are significant disparities by race and for students with disabilities.
History:
- In early July 2014, Governor Patrick signed the Fiscal Year 2015 Massachusetts Budget, which includes funds specifically to help schools implement Chapter 222.
- The ELTF collaborated with the district's Code of Conduct Advisory Committee (COCAC) and worked intensively to align the revisions to the code with the requirements of Chapter 222.
- The Boston School Committee approved those changes during the summer of 2013.
- Now that the law's regulations have been put in place, the ELTF is revisiting the Boston code with school officials to make sure it remains aligned.
- The ELTF plans to monitor compliance with Chapter 222 and its regulations at the local, district and state levels.
- Members of the ELTF will also continue to collaborate with COCAC by representing families of city’s students facing school exclusion and by monitoring citywide school data.
- The ELTF remains available to consult with school reform advocates throughout the country.

- A list of legal resources is provided, along with information about how to join or connect with BSAC.
In collaboration with the BPS Office of Student Support Services and Office of Equity, we have developed a reporting function so that students can report incidences of the Code of Conduct being improperly implemented, as well as incidences of intolerance.

Teachers (Quality; Evaluation; Cultural Competence)
Premise: Role of teachers’ implicit bias. Boston’s public school system is struggling — and failing — to satisfy a federal mandate to diversify its ranks of teachers, a requirement made all the more difficult as a generation of the city’s black educators retires. Boston is under a 1974 court order stipulating that 25 percent of the district’s teaching staff be black, with another 10 percent comprised of other minority groups. The district meets Garrity’s standard for Hispanic and Asian teachers, but just 22.7 percent of last year’s Boston Public Schools teachers were black, according to state data. According to data shared in 2014, while 86 percent of Boston Public School (BPS) students identify as black, Latino, or Asian, only 37 percent of their teachers are people of color. The numbers are even more extreme for the Latino population specifically; Latinos make up 40 percent of Boston Public School students and 10 percent of teachers.

Effort: School Quality Working Group

● The School Quality Working Group (SQWG) was established by the Boston School Committee in May 2013 to continue the efforts of the External Advisory Committee (EAC) to identify the core indicators of school quality.
● Each school will be held accountable for 21 outcomes in the following five domains:
  ○ Student Performance
  ○ Teaching and Learning
  ○ Family, Community and Culture
  ○ Leadership and Collaboration
  ○ Student Access and Opportunities
● Currently, to determine school tiers, schools are ranked only on the basis of their MCAS proficiency and growth scores, and then the list is divided into four equal parts. The top 25% of schools are considered Tier 1, the second 25% of schools Tier 2, and so on. The SQWG has developed a method of determining school tiers that looks at a more comprehensive set of measures and divides tiers based on absolute quality rather than quality relative to other schools.
● Family, Community, and Culture
11. The school promotes inclusion of all students, families and community stakeholders so the school community learns to acknowledge, respect, and build on social and cultural differences.

- Students and families of all backgrounds feel included, welcomed, and respected at the school
- The school engages students and families of all backgrounds
- School communicates effectively with families and students from diverse backgrounds
- School environment and culture reflect the diversity of students and families
  - Parent Climate Survey questions on developing thriving, inclusive schools, classrooms, and communities

Effort: Millionaires Tax

- A 2018 constitutional amendment referendum — given a preliminary green light by the Legislature this year — to raise taxes on millionaires and funnel that cash to transportation and education.
- Raising wages and benefits for the poorest workers
- more heavily taxing the very rich
- using that new money to improve education and transportation
- Would impose an additional tax of 4 percent on annual taxable income in excess of $1 million starting in 2019
- And the new tax would be tied to inflation, so the levy would continue to apply only to very wealthy people
- The state Department of Revenue has estimated if there is not an exodus of wealthy people from Massachusetts, the tax measure could bring in as much as $2.2 billion annually
